

Subscribe to our weekly newsletter

✉ Enter email address >

Is competition the root of all evil?

JEFF SAND 16 January, 2008

It is said that money is the root of all evil. Money is a measuring stick for actions and deeds. My belief is that competition is the root of all that is bad. An argument is a form of competition. At the core of all fights and disagreements is competition. Competing for who is right, who has access, and who gets what, leads to what many would say is what is bad within our society (Poverty, crime, divorce). We are taught at an early age that all advancement comes through competition. What do we lose when we have to compete in every human interaction. What do we really win when another has to lose? How annoying is it having to deal with a competition sick individual? This question is competing with other ideas in your mind right now.

smarter faster™

TRENDING

'Waterworld' was a documentary? Geologists think Earth could have once been 100% ocean

Masturbation boosts your immune system, helping you fight off infection and illness

The supervolcano that can wipe out the U.S. and kill billions may be overdue fo...

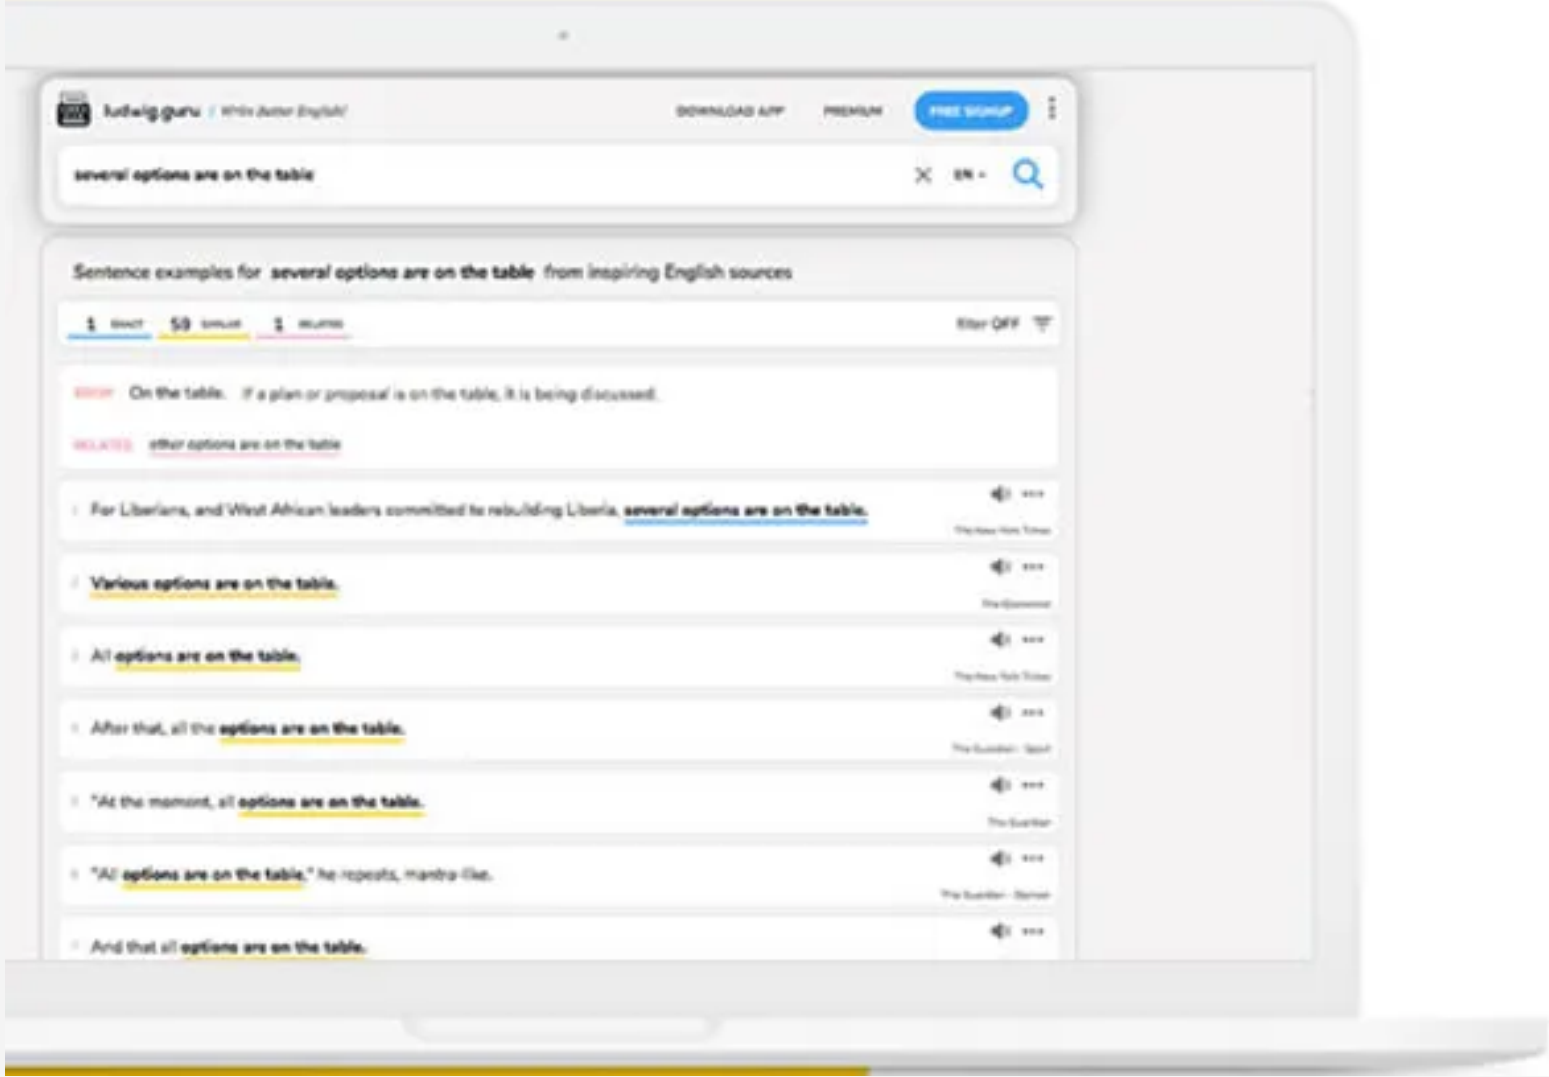

How coronavirus spreads from person to person

That chilling coronavirus video graph? It only tells half the story.

ludwig.guru

Unlimited Queries Search as much as you want

Ad-Free

Stay focused on your writing

GEAR

Write killer sentences with Ludwig, the premium writing tool

by BIG THINK

Enhanced Database

This sentence search engine takes an innovative approach to improving your writing skills.

Ad-Free

Stay focused on your writing

+ Keep Reading

SURPRISING SCIENCE

What you should know about coronavirus COVID-19 (and what not to worry about)

SURPRISING SCIENCE

'Waterworld' was a documentary? Geologists think Earth...

VIDEOS

When can government restrict speech? | Classical Liberalism

PERSONAL GROWTH

The 'opposite of addiction' theory: How community can drive recovery

POLITICS & CURRENT AFFAIRS

Are we psychologically prepared for the coronavirus outbreak?

SURPRISING SCIENCE

Evolution: That famous 'march of progress' image is just wrong

POLITICS & CURRENT AFFAIRS

Want to be an astronaut? NASA is hiring!

POLITICS & CURRENT AFFAIRS

How coronavirus spreads from person to person