Join HuffPost Plus

U.S. Edition

JOIN A

BUSINESS

SCHOOL

HEC.

WORLD-CLASS

Find out more

TRENDING

DOJ Watchdog Expected To

Find Russia Probe Valid

Joe Walsh Calls Himself A 'Reformed Outlaw' As He

Trains His Attacks On Trump

The Gas Industry's Bid To Kill A

Trump Says Rudy Giuliani Will

Tell Congress About His

Hawaii's Most Populated

Island Passes Sweeping

Single-Use Plastic Ban

The reality of being a

Subscribe to the In(formation) email.

SUBSCRIBE

Find out more

AdChoices D

woman — by the

HUFFPOST

numbers.

JOIN A

BUSINESS

SCHOOL

HEC.

WORLD-CLASS

address@email.com

Recent Ukraine Trip

Town's Fossil Fuel Ban

Despite Flaws

AdChoices D

AdChoices D

HIGHLINE

×

Lisa R. Petty, Contributor I am a writer, animal lover, educator, mother, wife, and joker. Facebook Family Feud

04/04/2016 03:00 pm ET | Updated Dec 06, 2017

Long ago, back in the days before high speed Wi-Fi or even dial up, there was a time when we hardly ever saw our extended families. Maybe, we would see them once every few years for a holiday, or maybe for a wedding or funeral. Other than that, the only time we communicated with them was via Christmas card or rare phone call. I miss that time.

Now, we have Facebook to keep us connected with EVERYONE 24/7. There are some good sides to Facebook. It's great for high school reunions and for forming neighborhood groups. It's also good for finding work related groups. For writers, it is one of the best ways to interact with other writers and find new readers. So, it does have its purposes.

On the other hand, it has some really bad points. We just get too much information about friends and family. I'm not talking about when they go to the gym or what they ate for lunch. I'm talking about things like the fact that they support Donald Trump for president. I could also do without knowing that a lot of people credit prayer for any successful surgery. Why even go to the doctor if God is so good? It was SO MUCH better when I just didn't know these things.

Most of the time I grit my teeth and move on, or get the heck off of Facebook and do something productive. SOMETIMES, I speak my mind. This usually ends up beginning a family feud, and not the fun game show kind. I'm not alone in this. I have witnessed my share of other people's feuds and they always fit into one of these categories.

Sibling "Love" - This is when siblings obviously don't like each other, but attempt to post "just kidding" statuses.

"You always reminded me of a baby rhino. Smiley face."

"I always knew where my brother was by the trail of boogers on the wall. Lol."

IHUFFPOST

REAL LIFE. REAL NEWS. REAL VOICES.

Help us tell more of the stories that matter from voices that too often remain unheard.

Become a founding member

Vote Cancellation - I'm one of three Democrats in my family, so I see this one a lot.

"I voted for Trump because my stupid, libtard sister prolly voted for that Jewish guy. I'm not racist. I just want to make America great again, like Nazi Germany was."

In this case, favorite means heinous.

Outing the Awkward - Sometimes family members post "favorite" pictures of each other.

Because Jesus - For some folks, faith is more important than being loving and supportive to family.

"Here's my favorite picture of my lovely sister. Doesn't she look great with headgear?"

"I don't approve of your gayness because I love the lord. I don't hate you; I hate the sin. Prayers."

Mom Says - I know parents say they don't have favorites, but they usually do. The favorite sibling usually KNOWS this, too.

"These bar pictures that you post all the time are the reason mom doesn't invite you to dinner. Mom said she wonders how you ever got married with those teeth. You should've worn your headgear more."

Fugly Fortune - When parents or grandparents die, there is usually some kind of argument over the inheritance.

"Did you buy that new car with that money you stole from me?"

"Grandpa wanted ME to have his Joan Rivers egg collection."

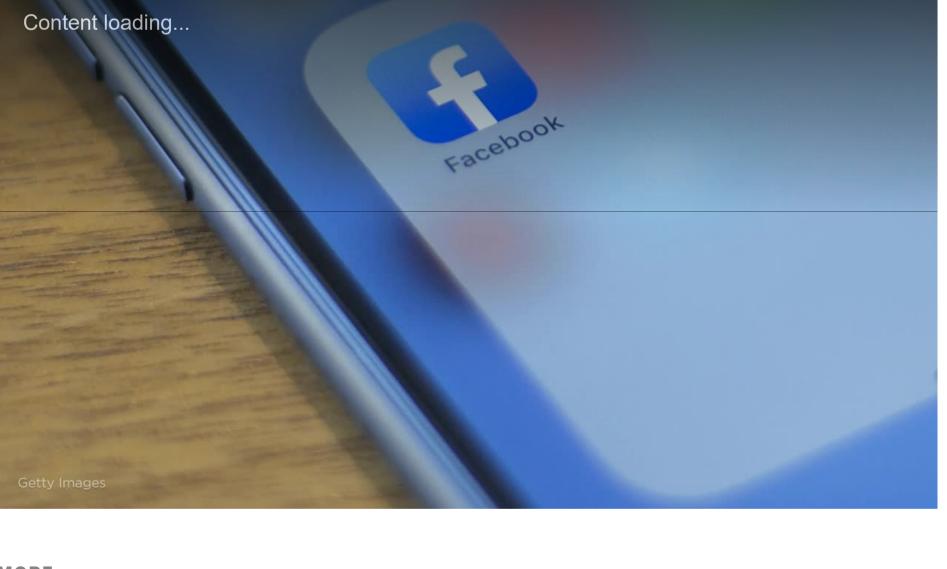

Pregnant Again - In a lot of families, there is always that one person who just won't stop branching the family tree.

"We are throwing a baby shower for my sister and her latest baby daddy. If you gave her a gift at the last four showers don't bother buying anything."

I know you all have seen these special arguments on Facebook. You may have even had these arguments. How could you not when everyone's thoughts and opinions are in your face all of the time. I think this is why Zuckerberg chose to call it FACEbook. Have you seen any that do not fit into one of the categories above? Let me hear from you in the comment section.

NICE perm, dork! BEFORE YOU GO

MORE: Dysfunctional Family Women Family Facebook

Failing To Notice Who's In The Background BridesBlush | Sponsored

Where Rick Harrison Lives At 54 över hela världen har väntat på! Will Make You Especially Sad Forge Of Empires - Free Online Game | Sponsored MedicareGranny | Sponsored

Tab©la Feed

MOST SHARED

For Nude Photos: It's Not 'Taboo'

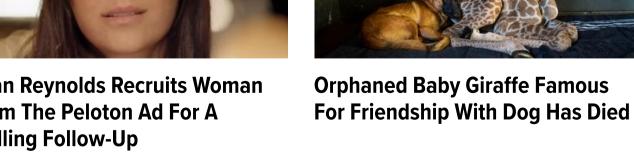

Advertisement by Burrell Agency

Impeaching Trump

After Day

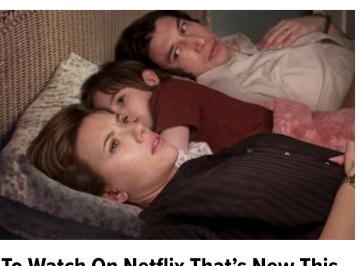

WHAT'S HOT

50+ Assemble Near Russian Village

What To Watch On Netflix That's New This Week (Dec. 1-7)

Ex-Ethics Chief Roasts Trump-Defending Republicans With A List Of Future Quotes

NEWS

Advertisement by Andorra

CONTACT US

Part of HuffPost Women. ©2019 Verizon Media. All rights reserved.

COUPONS